Message From Dean Beardsley

Welcome back to Darden!

That sentence takes on special meaning this year as you join us for the first full in-person Darden Reunion Weekend since 2019, before the start of the COVID-19 pandemic. We at Darden have been eagerly awaiting this moment, and judging by the record registrations for this year's event, you were, too!

Reunion is a time to experience firsthand the progress toward our collective vision for the School. Look around and you'll see this progress with the construction of the new Darden boutique hotel, arboretum and botanical gardens, which are due to open in early 2023. It's reflected in our reputation, which I'm proud to say resulted in more Top 10 rankings for Darden than any other business school in the latest MBA program ranking from The Princeton Review, including No. 1 for Best Professors for the fifth year in a row.

We are so grateful that you are here. Darden's success depends on the active involvement of our more than 17,000 alumni — who give generously of their time, energy and resources by volunteering, attending events around the globe, returning to Grounds, and supporting the School through philanthropy, including the Darden Annual Fund.

We are in the midst of our ambitious Powered by Purpose campaign, which is rapidly approaching the $400 million milestone. Reunion weekend provides a special moment for you to experience the potential of the School as you help us reshape our beautiful Grounds and facilities, recruit and retain talented professors, and attract the very best students through scholarships and an amazing student experience. By seizing these opportunities, the School will build on what you know and love so that Darden values can continue creating value for future generations.

I invite you to join me for the State of the School presentation on Saturday morning in Abbott Center Auditorium to learn more about our progress and incredible momentum.

Wahoowa!

Scott C. Beardsley

FOSTERING CONNECTION AND BELONGING: UNLOCKING POTENTIAL AND PRODUCTIVITY IN UNCERTAIN TIMES

Melissa Thomas-Hunt, John D. Forbes Distinguished Professor of Business Administration

Classroom 150

Join Professor Melissa Thomas-Hunt for a discussion on creating connections that activate productivity. Research has shown that people have a physiological need to be connected, and people who have a strong sense of connection and belonging are more productive. With remote work further removing people from one another, strong leaders will need to be deliberate in connecting with their teams. Come experience the power of fostering deliberate connections that our First Years MBAs unlock in the “Leadership & Organizational Behavior” core course.

10 a.m.–10:30 a.m.

INTRODUCING THE FUTURE YEAR SCHOLARS PROGRAM

Katherine Alford, Director of Admissions, Future Year Scholars Program

Classroom 130

Darden’s Future Year Scholars Program is in its sixth year of accepting exceptional undergraduate and graduate talent to the Full-Time MBA program on a deferred enrollment pathway. Admitted students have the option to work for two to six years prior to matriculation. Join Katherine Alford for insight on the Future Year Scholars Program. She will share more details about the program and answer frequently asked questions.

No food or beverage is allowed inside the auditorium.

As business realigns around environmental protection, social impact and sustainable governance, the expectations of employees, boards, managers, suppliers, communities and other stakeholders are changing. THE ENCORE CASE: FINDING PURPOSEFUL WORK LATER IN YOUR CAREER

Marty Speight (MBA '96), Career Consultant

Jen Coleman, Executive Director, Alumni Career Services

Sponsored by the Armstrong Center for Alumni Career Services

iLab (Classroom 180/190)

For management professionals, the idea of retiring and not working may be anathema. In fact, older working professionals often transition to a new kind of work, or an “encore career,” that is invigorating and purpose-driven. Meaningful late-stage careers can come in many forms, from volunteering to entrepreneurship. If you are considering a second act and wondering how to get started, join Darden’s Alumni Career Services coaches to explore effective ways to navigate this stage and transition successfully. If you are already thriving in an encore role, please come and share your experiences!

REVISING THE NARRATIVE: WOMEN’S JOURNEY TO DARDEN AND BEYOND

Allison Elias, Assistant Professor of Business Administration

Classroom 140, livestream overflow room Classroom 150

Traditionally, women have been less visible in our examples of leaders, our stories of leadership and our narratives about professional success. This event highlights women’s experiences before, during and after their Darden educations. Join us for a panel discussion, moderated by Professor Allison Elias, with several Darden alumnae sharing their experiences. They will account for their journey to Darden and tell us how a Darden education shaped their subsequent career moves as they pursued leadership positions and attained professional success. A networking reception will immediately follow for alumnae and student members of the Graduate Women in Business club.

FRIDAY, 29 APRIL

3 p.m.–5 p.m.

DARDEN BOUTIQUE HOTEL TOURS

Individuals who opt to participate in a hotel tour should plan to wear flat, closed-toed shoes. Please meet in the Saunders Hall lobby to secure personal protective equipment before beginning the tour. Tours will take approximately 30 minutes.

Jen Coleman, Executive Director, Alumni Career Services

Gwen Mellor Romans (EMBA '13), Executive Coach, Alumni Career Services

iLab (Classroom 180/190)

Much is being discussed today about the future of work, and whether it will be in the office, remote or hybrid. But what about the future of our behavior at work? In order to attract and retain the highest performers, leaders of world-class companies are initiating a cultural shift away from “command and control” leadership toward an inquiry-based, coaching management style. Join us to learn more about the neuroscience behind coaching and how you can incorporate coaching skills into your own management style.

TIMELESS INSIGHTS FOR MODERN LEADERSHIP

Jared Harris, Associate Professor; Samuel Slover Research Chair

Sponsored by the Olsson Center for Applied Ethics and Darden Executive Education & Lifelong Learning

Abbott Center Auditorium

When we consider the pressing management and leadership challenges posed by technology or other features of the modern world, it's tempting to think of such problems as new and uncharted. But perhaps some ancient wisdom is informative. Join Professor Jared Harris for a case discussion of a 2,500-year-old story – Plato's “Allegory of the Cave” – with a focus on what insights it might hold for today's leaders. What does this allegory have to do with modern life? What things shackle our own minds? How might we discern reality from representations of reality? How might today's leaders help others navigate today's “caves” and “shackles?”

Learn more about Darden in the D.C. area at darden.virginia.edu/dc.

SEE THE FOREST FOR THE TREES

We invite you to support a new fundraising initiative:

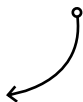

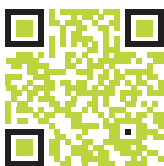

PLANT A TREE AT DARDEN

During the next year, we will plant 1,300 trees — ranging from dogwoods to Eastern redbuds — in the five-acre arboretum and botanical gardens surrounding the new Darden boutique hotel.

Name a tree — or trees — for $10,000 each, or honor your graduating class, favorite faculty member, fellow student, a loved one or an organization with a tree or grove of trees.

The trees will include a combination of local and global varieties, consistent with Darden's place as a school in the Commonwealth — and of the world. Celebrate Arbor Day and the School's commitment to sustainability by helping create a healthy Virginia forest and a greener Darden for years to come.
